Background

The HKCMAC is a voluntary organisation. It was established in 1965 by Fr. Edward Collins, S.J. (the first appointed Chairman) with the approval of the late Bishop Lawrence Bianchi (the first President) to provide Hong Kong with a specialized agency for the improvement of marriage and parenthood. It was formally incorporated in 1967.

The Agency started with Natural Family Planning service in a few Catholic Hospitals. In 1966, courses in human relationships, now termed Family Life Education, were introduced. Marriage Counselling services did not begin till 1968 and soon after Pre-Marriage Education. Marriage Mediation Counselling, the first of its kind in Hong Kong, started with the cooperation of the Legal Aid Department, Hong Kong Government in 1988.

Address of His Eminence Joseph Cardinal Zen Ze- Kiun, S.D.B. at
The 42nd Annual General Meeting of
The Hong Kong Catholic Marriage Advisory Council
held on 14 November, 2008

Mrs. Louise Chan, Ladies and Gentlemen,

I must begin by congratulating Madam Chairman and all the staff and volunteers of CMAC for the great contribution you are making to healthy and happy family life in the Diocese and in Hong Kong. Your very positive efforts to spread the truth about relationships in no small way contribute to the health and happiness of many individuals, families and the community. We are very aware nowadays of the negative and destructive damage to family life made by divorce, cohabitation, single parent families, abortion, pornography and sexual abuse.

In the face of this negative behavior, your service in CMAC has become more and more important and necessary. CMAC personnel realize and believe in God's plan in creating men and women, male and female. We believe in God's plan of making the family the basic unit of society where husband and wife love and complement each other and provide love, security, protection and care for their children. Healthy and loving families make a healthy and loving community and nation. Where family life breaks down, there is much suffering and unhappiness. We realize too that life is precious and is a gift of God; that life is not our own but has been given to us to love and serve our Creator and all His people, who are His children everywhere. And so we should respect God's gift, protect and care for it in everyway possible.

A Pro-Family society is crucial for the success of Hong Kong as a harmonious city. All sectors of society, Government, NGO's and the private sector must be involved in a cooperative effort to care for all members of the family, young, old, sick and handicapped. This spirit of caring fosters a spirit of love in society and leads to a happier and more prosperous family life. The Chief Executive wishes to build a harmonious society but this cannot be achieved without taking care of the disadvantaged, the elderly, the poor, the handicapped and the unemployed.

Pope Paul VI said "If you want Peace, work for Justice."

In our history, marriage has faced problems before and yet it has survived threats as great as it faces today. It has survived in spite of the many pressures being put on it. Why? Because the family is God's plan for us and its nature will not change. He made us male and female for the continuing of the human race and marriage as a long term commitment of a husband and wife for the good of the human race. Marriage is good for men and women, and for children, so that they can grow in love and be loved and become truly human.

The strength of marriage is in God's plan. He knows what is good for us. Marriage will always be good and valuable for our society. There will always be many healthy, long term, monogamous loving relationships. These marriages provide a wide range of social, moral, religious, emotional, physical, financial and psychological support which parents and children need.

CMAC has expanded its services to meet the needs of the present day including marital sex therapy, fertility counseling etc. These are important developments and a sign that CMAC is responding creatively to the demands and needs of people today.

I wish to express my admiration, appreciation and gratitude to your wonderful groups of volunteers who find time to give generous service. I am sure you have given joy to many and that God will bless all abundantly.

CMAC continues to work closely with the Diocese, in parishes and schools to promote the Gospel of Christ's love realized in marriage and family life. I pray, with a grateful heart, that God continues to bless you all and your wonderful work in supporting His plan for the family, which He has created out of love.

The Hong Kong Catholic Marriage Advisory Council
The Annual Report for April 2008 – March 2009

Service provision of this year of the Council had been a phase of integration and consolidation geared to higher levels of quality, efficacy and user-friendliness. With our wide range of service coverage at both preventive and remedial levels, more users from diverse backgrounds had been served. It was reflected in the significant growth in the number of program participants and service referrals. In particular, at the times of economic downturn, we still devote to preserve the strength of couples and families and give our best for the public even with limited resources in the days ahead.

The following are the service reports from the various Sub-Committees:

Marriage Counseling Service

It was the fifth year that we provided non-subvented marriage counseling service to the general public on a territory wide basis. The total number of enquiries was maintained at a high level of 452, indicating the prevalence of demand in the society. Most of the users (56%) knew about the service through our website, printed advertisement and the media. Another 26% of the users were recommended by their friends or relatives, who were ex-users of our service. About 6% of the users were referred by other social service agencies, including government and non-government organization.

With manpower of two counselors, a total of 195 cases were handled. Most couples sought help from marriage counseling only when their marriages were in severe distress. Marital problems they encountered were very complicated and deep-rooted. There was also an increase of newly-wed couples at the fringe of marital separation seeking help. The main problems presented included unmet role expectation (36%), extra-marital affairs of husbands (28%), and physical separation (16%). Other problems presented included personal problems of emotions and behavior (20%). Among all the cases we handled, over half (54%) were provided with conjoint couple therapy and another one-quarter (27%) with individual therapy.

Grace and Joy Integrated Family Service Centre

The Centre had handled 1285 cases, of which 577 were new cases. At the end of March 2009, there were 718 active cases under our management. Among them, 357 cases were of Intensive Counseling nature, whilst 361 cases fell under the Brief Counseling category.

One third of the active cases in need of Intensive Counseling had marital difficulties, and another one third had both emotional as well as mental health problems whereas 17% of cases had parental difficulties. Among the active Brief Counseling cases, 33% of them were related to housing problems, 13% were of financial difficulties and 24% of families had members with physical sickness, mental illness or mental retardation. Distribution of the problem nature reflected that the salient family problems included family relationship problems, housing as well as financial problems. Confirmation of the construction of Hong Kong Transit Railway in Western District had resulted in sharp rental increase and demolition of old buildings. Eventually, more and more users within our service boundary would experience the pressure of high rental and even the need for house relocation. Henceforth, our counseling service and housing assistance had been helpful to the users in the process of community transition. It would press a need for our service.

In addition to casework approach, we also used groups and programs to deliver family education aiming at strengthening the coping abilities of families. We had organized 6 therapeutic groups, 46 developmental/educational groups and 100 programs, with a total of 6716 participants. We were delighted to see that groups addressing mental health, personal growth and parenting issues had received good responses from users. Besides, it was encouraging to see users actively and continuously enrolled in programs of marriage enrichment.

During the summer of 2008, we had launched a series of family programs echoing the Olympic spirits and promoting vitality and love in the family. We also worked hand in hand with other community organizations on the celebration of the world event held in China.

We had successfully applied for funds from the Central and Western District Council, Jockey Club Summer Youth Program Subsidy, Apple Daily Charity Fund and Social Welfare Department to launch projects for the community. As one of the assessment centers of The Community Chest Cheung Kong Rainbow Fund and the Direct Cash Assistance for Young Peoples, we had recommended 84 and 82 applications, respectively for those grants.

Marriage Mediation Counseling Service

Despite budget cut in the three-year Community Project Grant commencing in 2008, workers of the Marriage Mediation Counseling Team tried hard to achieve high output and good performance. They had handled 464 cases and 1021 phone enquiries this year. The average for monthly active caseload was 195 while for closed cases, it was 264. Among these cases, 87% reached a satisfactory agreement and 95.5% of the service users had indicated satisfaction after receiving the service. On the other hand, 96% of cases had agreed plans achieved, whereas 89% had shown improvement in their main problems.

In order to assist families with conflicts arising from parent-child interaction and couple relationship, a booklet on 'How to resolve family conflicts' (處理家庭衝突小錦囊) was published in March 2009 and distributed to Integrated Family Service Centers, Family and Child Protective Service Units, churches and schools.

Apart from cases, 7 community educational talks on divorce mediation, conflict resolution, legal proceeding on divorce, and enhancement of children's adjustment to parental divorce were delivered for service users and social workers. In addition, 3 therapeutic groups for divorced women on better adjustment, 2 therapeutic groups for children from divorced families and 2 therapeutic groups for couples on conflict resolution were organized. For free legal consultation service for divorcing and separating couples, 18 sessions had been conducted during the same period of time.

Furthermore, the Marriage Mediation Counseling team continued to play a leading role in providing professional training in the field of mediation. A two-session workshop with 116 participants on Family Mediation Practice Skills was held in March 2009 for lawyers, counselors, social workers and accredited mediators to enhance their knowledge and skills in mediation and working with the divorced families. Much favorable feedback had been received from this workshop.

Co-parenting Project for Divorced & Separated Parents

It was the first year of the three-year Co-parenting Project funded by The Community Chest of Hong Kong. The purpose of the project focused on echoing the need for close cooperation between the divorced couples in their parental roles. This pioneer project had received positive feedbacks and favorable recommendations both from the service users and community organizations since its implementation.

The project had handled 43 new cases last year. Parents were coached in conflicts resolution with their ex-spouses for the purpose of minimizing the psychological harm done to their children. In some cases, children were also invited to receive play therapy or personal counseling service for strengthening of their resilience in facing their family transition. Among these cases, 24 cases were closed for having completed the agreed plans.

Publicity and promotion had been the main focus of work for the first year of the pioneer project. 4,800 copies of promotional pamphlets were distributed to non government organizations, schools, churches and government offices. A new website for divorced parents on co-parenting education for the public had been set up since February, 2008 and 2,000 visitors were recorded.

Besides, 4 workshops were conducted to both social workers and public on divorce and co-parenting. These included workshops on understanding the changing structure of families after divorce and its psychological impact upon children, conflict resolution skills, communication skills, emotion management skills and co-parenting skills of divorcee.

A therapeutic group was held for divorced adults in November, 2008.

The participants were able to benefit from the group interaction and sharing on the topics like "Rebuilding an intimate parent-child relationship", "Restructuring the relationship and roles with the ex-spouse", "Emotion Awareness and Emotion Management", "Wisdom of single parenthood". Users were empowered with more confidence in adjusting to single parenthood and after divorce.

Sex Therapy Service

Our Sexual Dysfunction Therapy Service Centre had expanded casework service due to increased requests this year. With 20 cases brought forward from the previous year, a total of 60 cases had been served. Case nature was listed as follows: hypoactive sexual desire disorder (13%), male erectile disorder (18-10%), vaginismus (49%), dyspareunia (3%), premature ejaculation (3-5%) and sexual dysfunction due to psychological/relationship difficulties (5-20%).

As compared with statistics of the previous year, there was a significant shift in the nature of problems first presented. The cases of hypoactive sexual desire disorder had dropped from 19% to 13%, and male erectile disorder from 18% to 10%; while on the other hand, sexual dysfunction due to psychological/relationship difficulties had dramatically increased from 5% to 20%. Such changes could be explained by the increased complexities of sexual problems that couples experienced in recent trends. As for vaginismus and dyspareunia, statistical percentile remained constant. In view of support needed to stabilize marital relationships and to facilitate case progress, 1 therapeutic group was run for couples to deal with the issue of marital and sexual satisfaction.

Regarding enquiry service, 117 calls were attended and they were referred from the following sources: CMAC's publicity (61%), hospitals and clinics (6%), Social Welfare Department and non-governmental organizations (9%), mass media (7%), family and friends (4%) and religious groups (1%). The number of enquires had increased by almost 15% from previous year.

Apart from therapeutic service, adult sex education were frequently delivered to general public through invitations by schools, churches and community organizations. Altogether, 9 programs of this kind had been run to serve 308 participants. Last but not least, we continued the collaboration with mass media to deliver messages of happy marriages to general public on Radio Television Hong Kong -Radio 5.

Parish (Pre-Marriage Course) Volunteer Training Project

With the devotion of our volunteers and the contribution of Parish Team workers, a total of 21 pre-marriage courses (19 day camps and 2 live-in camps) were conducted by 51 volunteer couples. Altogether we served 447 couples, 76% were mixed marriages while 24% of the couples were both Catholics. On the whole, their responses were positive and the three most popular topics remained to be Couple Traits (19%), Couple sharing on married life (20%) and Catholic view on marriage (17%).

Regarding the FOCCUS marriage preparation service, a total of 183 couples were being served. 106 couples were Chinese-speaking and 77 were English-speaking. Feedback revealed that the service could meet their individual needs and the facilitation process was both comprehensive and in-depth.

For better marriage preparation, engaged couples were often encouraged to register for both pre-marriage course and FOCCUS with a special discount offer. Totally, 21 couples had used such marriage preparation package.

Service for couples planning to regularize their marriages in the church was still needy. 4 marriage enrichment programs based on materials of REFOCCUS, a marriage enrichment inventory, were conducted for 37 couples in different parishes across the territory.

Regarding the training for volunteer FOCCUS facilitators, three couples had been recruited and completed the basic training plus practicum. Together with the six previously trained volunteer couples, 33 cases had been served. Ongoing training including two cases sharing sessions for all parish FOCCUS facilitators were also organized and the total attendance for the sessions was 30.

To cope with the fast changing needs of pre-married couples, a new manual of pre-marriage course had been developed in 2008. There had been 14 times of pilot run of the new manual. The Team organized one briefing session and one training session for the volunteer couples. About 60% of the volunteer couples had already attended the new manual training session and started to use it in Pre-marriage Courses.

For the enhancement of manpower of volunteer couples, training of the eighth batch of volunteer couples started in April 08 and was completed in September. Altogether 12 couples had joined the team as new blood after the training.

For strengthening the bonding of the newly-wed couples, a four hours workshop was organized in October 2008 for 15 couples, who were PMC participants. The workshop covered skills of conflict resolution, family of origin influence and elements of marital satisfaction. Feedbacks from participants were positive and encouraging.

In response to the needs of Catholic singles, a developmental group of 10 sessions was held for 10 in their thirties in January this year. The clients acknowledged that the group helped enhance their self understanding and relationships with others and God. Moreover, a supportive network had been established among the group members afterwards.

The Parish Family and Marriage Resource Center continued to serve as a resource supporting unit for teachers, parish pastoral workers, Parish Pastoral Council Committee members, Diocesan Youth Commission members; parish youth group committee members, and parish couples to read and borrow reference materials.

In May 2008, a sharing session on how to set up a resource center was conducted for the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception Pastoral Committee for Marriage and the Family.

To meet the demands of marriage counseling service for Catholics, the team had handled 52 intake enquiries and 29 cases this year. Case nature included communication problems and ex-marital affairs whereas source of referrals were from former PMC or FOCCUS participants, parish priests, friends of clients and churches.

Natural Family Planning

The total number of new cases was 172. Service statistics of all the 6 NFP centers had shown a downward turn. The percentage of couples aiming at achieving and spacing pregnancy was 13.39% and 65.27% respectively. Figures of enrolment seemed to indicate a need for further promotion of natural family planning and the concept of fertility awareness in parishes which helped us review the emphasis of our work in the long run.

Demographic characteristics of clients showed that the dominant age group of users was 20 to 34. It seemed to indicate that Natural Family Planning was mainly treated as a birth control means at the beginning of marriage for them. Regarding the source of users, it was note worthy that 82.7% of our learners came from pre-marriage courses run by the Council, whereas 13.1% of learners were referred by friends and relatives.

In response to the continuous promotion of "The Year of Family" with a special focus on the virtue of chastity by the Hong Kong Catholic Diocese, we offered free talks to the St. Margaret Church, Rosary Church and St Teresa Church to introduce the spirit of NFP and life value related to marital growth. The total attendance of the 3 talks was 60.

Volunteers training and coordination were crucial to upkeep the knowledge, skills and team spirit on service delivery. Four regular center meetings with attendance of 50 volunteers had been organized. This year, the Annual Volunteers Day was held in August, 2008 with the participation of thirty volunteers and staff members. A thanksgiving Mass and delegation was celebrated by Rev. Lawrence Lee at the Ricci Hall followed by a banquet dinner at the restaurant of Hong Kong Polytechnics University Campus.

China Project- Guangzhou NFP Teacher Training course

The Council still served as an agent providing advice to the project.

Our consultant team including Dr. R.C. Ruiz and three senior NFP teachers paid regular visits to Guangzhou offering ongoing training and clinical experience sharing. The setting up of a NFP website had helped distributing fruitful teaching materials and information for the teachers and users of this project.

Love and Life Education Project

The love and life education project continued to convey beautiful messages of true love and respect for life and sex from a Catholic viewpoint through various educational activities for students and parents.

In 2008-2009, 102 sessions of talks were delivered to primary schools, secondary schools and universities. Apart from these talks, 8 workshops of 32 sessions were held for teenagers. Totally 20,526 youngsters and parents were served this year and it was an increase of 40% than last year. Workshops were conducted for Catholic Society in various universities. Since university students were more mature and experienced to discuss love and life issues, their reaction and feedback were far more positive than expected. The Chastity Week, a more comprehensive package of promoting chastity had been initiated and was welcomed by schools. Through active participation of schools and students, we could further tailor an effective program to fit their needs.

Since ongoing in-service training was essential to upkeep staff with updated information and knowledge to meet the service demands, responsible workers had attended a seminar presented by Father P.J.Elliott from Australia, a talk held by "The Hong Kong Anti-Cancer Society" about the HPV Vaccine and a series of lectures on the Theology of Body organized by the Diocesan Pastoral Commission for Marriage and the Family during October and November.

In order to tap in more referrals, promotion leaflet together with invitation letters were updated and sent to schools and parishes twice last year. Promotion leaflets for Chastity Week were also sent to schools to invite more referrals.

Professional Training Service

Continuous practice revision and ongoing training were vital for provision of high quality counseling service. Based on this principle, the Council had devoted to organize different seminars, workshops and certified training courses in order to share our clinical experiences with other professionals in the field. We had invited overseas well-known speakers to conduct 5 seminars and workshops with total participants of 349 in 2008 -2009.

The one-year Training Program for Certified Emotion-Focused Therapy Practitioners for Couple Therapy was launched again in April 2008. It was a valued collaboration with Professor Leslie Greenberg and his professional training team from Toronto of Canada. The whole training program comprised of 8.5 days of workshops, monthly peer practice groups, and monthly supervision groups led by two of our experienced marriage counselors who were also the training facilitators of the program. For better learning results, we had to limit the number of participants to 30, and we had a full enrollment last year.

With the hope of helping to fulfill the needs for professional training in the field, we delivered 4 training courses with 22 sessions on marital work for the Training & Development Section of Social Welfare Department. The total number of participants from both the Social Welfare Department and other non government organizations were 147.

In addition, our marriage counselors were often invited by different organizations to provide training in couple therapy. We had totally run 10 sessions of workshops over the year. Inviting organizations included Diocesan Pastoral Commission for Marriage and the Family, Social Services Division of the Methodist Church, and the Suicide Crisis Intervention Centre of the Samaritan Befrienders.

Through sharing our practical experiences with other local practitioners and overseas speakers, our staffs had also been nurtured and equipped with updated skills and wisdom to help fill in the service gap and to better serve the community on the whole.
